Contrast 1 if which is presented

The caufe of this our Prefentment before you, is, An Appeal to you, defiring you to demonstrate to us, and the whole Land, the equity, or not equity of our caufe : And that you would either caft us by just reason under the feet of those we call Task-Malters, or Lords of Mannors. or elfe todeliver us ont of their Tyranaical hands : In whole hands, by way of Arreft, we are for the prefent, for a Trefpals to them, as they fay, In digging upon the Common Land. The fetling whereof, according to Equity and Reafon, wil quict the mindes of the opprefied people ; it will be a keeping of our Nationall Covenant :

Covenant ; it will be peace to your felves, and make England the most flourishing, and strongest Land in the world ; and the first of Nations that shall begin to give up their Crown and Scepter, their Dominion and Government into the hands of Jelus Chrift.

The caule is this, we, among it others of the common people, that have been ever friends to the Parliament, as we are affured our enemies wil witnefs to it, have plowed and dig'd upon Georges-Hill in Surrey, to fow com for the fuccour of man, offering no offence to any, but do carry our felves in love and peace towards all, having no intent to meddle with any mans inclofures, or propriety, til it be freely given to us by themfelves, but only to improve the Commons and wafte Lands to our beft advantage, for the relief of our felves and others, being moved thereunto by the Reafon hereafter following, not . expecting any to be much offended, in regard the caule is fo jult and upright.

Yet notwithstanding, there be three men (called by the people Lords of Manors) viz. Thomas Lord Wenman, Ralph Verny Knight, and Richard Winwood Elquire, have arrefted us for a trefpals in digging upon the Commons, and upon the Arreft we made our appearance in Kingfione Court, where we underftood we were arrefted for medling with other mens Rights ; and fecondly, they were incouraged to arreft us upon your Act of Parliament (as they tell us) to maintain the old laws ; we defired to plead our own caufe, the Court denied us and to fee a Lawyer we cannot, for divers reafons, as we may thew hereafter.

Now Sirs, our cafe is this, for we appeal to you, for you are the only men that we are to deal withall in this bufinels; Whether the common people, after all their taxes, freequarter, and lois of blood to recover England from under the Norman yoak that have the freedom to improve the Comons, and wafte Lands free to themfelves as freely their own, as the Inclofures are the propriety of the elder brothers? Or whether the Lords of Manors fhall have them, according to their old Caltom from the Kings Will and Grant pand o remain TaskTask-Mafters ftill over us, which was the peoples flavery under Conqueft.

We have made our appeal to you, to fettle this matter in the Equity and Reafon of it, and to pais the fentence of freedom to us you being the men with whom we have to do in this bulinels, in whole hands there is power to fettle it, for no Court can end this controversie but your Court of Parliament, as the cafe of this Nation now flands.

Therefore we intreat you to read over this following Declaration, wherein we have declared our Reafon, that the Commons and waite lands is the common peoples, and that in equity you ought to let them quietly enjoy them, as the elder brothers quictly enjoy their inclosures. The profit of this bufinels to the Nation, the quitting of the hearts of the poor oppreffed that are groaning under burthens and ftraights, and the peace of your own hearts, to fee the peace of the Nation fetled in his plat-form, will much countervail the fpending of fo much time.

Sirs, you know, that the Land of England is the land of our Nativity, both yours and ours, and all of us by the righteous Law of our Creation, ought to have food and rayment freely by our sightcous labouring of the earth, without working for hire, or paying rent one to another.

But fince the fall of man from that righteous Law, The Nations of the world have rife up in variance one against another. and fought against, murdered, and stoln the land of their Nativity one from another, and by their power of their conque'ts, have ftil fet up fome to rale in tyranny over others, and thereby have enflaved the conquered, which is a burden the whole Creation hath, and yet does groane under. The teeth of all Nations hath been fet on edge by this four grape, the coverous murdering fword.

England, you know, hath been conquered and enflaved divers times, and the beft Laws that England hath, (viz. Magna Charta) were got by our Forefathers importunate petitioning mto the Kings, that ful were their Task-mafters ; and yet these best laws ase yoaks and manicles, tying one fort of people people to be flaves to another; Clergy and Centry have got their freedom, but the common people ftil are, and have been left fervants to work for them, like the Ifratires under the Egyptian Task matters.

The last enflaving yoak that England groaned under, (and yet is not freed from) was the Norman, 25 you know; and fince William the Conqueror came in, about fix hundred years ago, all the Kings that ftil fucceeded, did confirm the old haws, or elfe make new ones, to uphold that Norman conquest over us; and the most favouring laws that we have, doth still binde the hands of the enflaved English from enjoying the freedom of their creation.

You of the Gentry, as wel as we of the Comonalty, all groaned under the burden of the bad Government, and burdening laws under the late King Charls, who was the latt fucceffor of William the Conqueror : you and we cried for a Parliament, and a Parliament was called, and wars, you know, prefently begun, between the King, that reprefented William the Conqueror, and the body of the English people that were enflaved.

We looked upon you to be our chief Councel, to agitate bufinels for us though you were fummoned by the Kings Writ, and cholen by the Free holders, that are the fucceflors of *William*the Conquerors fouldiers; you faw the danger fo great, that without a war England was like to be more enflaved, therefore you called upon us to affift you with plate, taxes, freequarter, and our perfons; and you promifed us, in the name of the Almighty, to make us a free people; thereupon you and we took the National Covenant with joynt confent, to endeavour the freedom, peace and fafety of the people of England.

And you and we joyned purfe and perfon together in this common caufe; and will the Conquerors fucceffor, which was Charls, was call out; and thereby we have recovered our felves from under that Normon yoak; and now unlefs you and we be meerly beforted with coveroufnefs, pride, and flavifh fear of men, it is, and will be our wildom to call out all those enflaving enflaving laws, which was the Tyrannical power that the Kings prefit us down by : O that not your eyes against the light, darken not knowledg, by dispute about particular mens priviledges, when universal freedom is brought to be tried before you, dispute no surther when truth appears, but be filent, and practife it.

Stop not your ears agsinft the fecret mourning of the opprefied, under thefe expressions left the Lord fee ir, and be offended, and thut his ears againft your cries, and work a deliverance for his waiting people fome other way then by you.

The maine thing that you thould look upon is the Land, which calls upon her children to be freed from the entanglement of the Norman Task-milters, for one third part lies waite and barren, and her children flarve for want, in regard the Lords of Manors will not fuffer the poor to mannure it.

When William the Conqueror came in, he took the land from the English, both the Enclosures from the Gentry, and the Commons and wafte lands from the common people, and gave our land to his Norman fouldiers.

Therefore feeing we have with joynt confent of purfe and perfon conquered his fucceffor, Charls, and the power now is in your hand, the Nations Reprefentative; O let the first thing you do, be this, to fet the land free. Let the Gentry have their inclosures free from all Norman erstaving intanglements whatfoever, and let the common people have their Commons and wafte lands fet free to them, from all Norman enslaving Lords of Mannors, that fo both elder and younger brother, as we fpring fucceffively one from another, may live free and quiet one by, and with another, not burthening one another in this land of our Nativity.

And this thing you are bound to fee done, or at leaft to endevor it, before another Reprefentative fucceed you; otherwife you cannot discharge your trust to God and man, for these Reasons,

First, if you free not the Land from entanglement of all Norm. n

Norman yoaks, or rather bondages, fo that the people, one as well as another may enjoy the benefit of their creation, that is, to have the land free to work upon, that they may cate their bread in righteoufnefs; that is to fay, let the Freeholders have there freedom to work quietly in their Inclofures, and let the common people have their Commons and wafte lands quiet to themfelves. If you eftablish not this, feeing power now is in your hand, you will be the first that break Covenant with Almighry God.

For you fwore in your National Covenant to endevour a Reformation according to the Word of God, which Reformation is to reftore us to that Primative freedom in the earth, in which the earth was first made and given to the fons of men, and that is to be a common treasury of livelihood to all, without working for hire, or paying rent to any, for this is the Reformation according to the Word of God before the fall of man, in which there is no respect of perfons

And feeing in particular you fivore to endeavour the freedom, peace and fafety of this people of England, flutting out no fort from freedom; therefore you cannot fay that the Gentry and Clergy were only comprehended, but without exception, all forts of people in the land are to have freedom, feeing all forts have affified you in perfon and purfe, and the common people more effectially, feeing their effates were weakeft, and their mifery in the wars the greateft.

therefore let the Gentry and Freeholders have their inclofures freed from all entanglements of Fines, Heriots, and other bardens, and let the common people have their Commons and wafte lands freed from entanglements of the Normor Lords of Mannors, and pluck up all Norman Tyranny by the roots, and fo keep your Covenant, that you, and all forts of people may live in peace one among another.

Secondly, if this freedom be not granted quietly, you will pall the blood and cries of the poor opprefied upon your heads; First, because you have taken their money in taxes, and freequarter from them, whereby they are made worse able to live then before the wars. Secondly, because in your low efface (9.) eflate, when you called upon us to come and help a bleeding dying Nation, and we did come with purle and perfon, and under-went great hardfhip, and you ful promifed us freedom in the end, if in cafe you and we prevailed over the Norman fucceffor, and we have prevailed.

And if now, while the price is in your hand, you thould fiil leave us under the Norman Lords of Manors, and will not quictly fuffer us to plant our felves upon the Commons, and wafte land, which is ours by the law of our Creation, and which is ours now by conquelt from under our oppreffor, for which we have paid taxes, given free-quarter, and adventured our lives; the Common-land now is as freely the common peoples, as you can fay the Inclofures are your propriety. If you deny this freedom, then you juftly pull the blood

If you deny this freedom, then you, and are Covenantand cries of the poor opprefied upon you, and are Covenantbreakers, and wil be proved double hypocrites; Firft, to Almighty God, in breaking Covenant with him, for in his Name you made the Covenant. Secondly, to men, in breaking Covenant with them, for the matter of the Covenant was the freenant with them, for the matter of the Covenant was the freedom, peace, and fafety of the people of England, taking in all forts of people.

Thirdly, if you do not fet us free from the Nerman yoake, now after you have taken our Taxes and Free-quarter from us, whereby we have dearly bought our Freedom, and you thereupon promifed freedom, and you have power now to give it, for if you fpeak the word the Norman yoaks will be broke, and all forts will rejoyce in freedom and righteoufnefs; but if you will not, you give a just occasion to the common people of England, never to truth the fair words of a Parliament any more, as you were alwayes very flow in thus the King, when he fwore by the word of a King, because you found that fubrilty and Self lay under, and no reality.

And truly the hearts of people are much falling from you, for your breach of Promifes when you have power to keep them, and for your neglect of giving them their freedom, and removing burthens; and what danger may enfue by that to your your felves, and the Nations, you know how to judgs and for our parts we are forty to hear the muttering of the people

O that there were a heart in you to confider of these things, and a righteous fie, how sweetly might you and the people live together, : If you grant this freedom we speak of, you gain the hearts of the Nation; if you neglect this, you will fall as fast in their affections as every on rife: I speak what I fee, and do you observe; flight not that love that speaks feelingly, from the sence of the Nations burdens.

Fourthly, 'f ftill you fhould effablith the old Norman laws, and confirm. Lords of Manors in their ancient Cufton, and oppreffing power over the Commor people, you would now at length, af er the wars with King Charls are over, take part with fuch (as is known very well) as have been either flat enemics, or ambidexters all along the wars, and will caff fuch as have been your true friends, at the feet of the Nations enemies, to be ftill opprefied by their cruelty. Surely if shefe Lords and Free-holders have their Inclofures effablished to them in peace, is not that f cedom enough ? Muft they needs have the Common-Lind I kewife? As Abab, that was reflicife till he had Nabeths Vineyard, and fo in the midft of their abundance, yet will gat the bread out of the poores mouthes. O, the land mourns in her children, under the hard hearted

Fifthly, If you eftablish the old Norman laws, That Lords of Manors shall still have the Commons and waste lands, then you are the maintainers of the old Norman Murder and These ftills for Lords of Manors came to be Tyrants over the poor enflaved English, by the Murder and These of Walliam the Conquirour, and downwards to this day they have held title to their Royakies therefrom, and from the will of the King : for when he had conquered, he turned the English out; and gave their land to b st Norman fouldiers.

Sixthly If you establish the old Norman laws, and this especially. That the Lords of Manors shall still be Lords of the-Common

Common tand, and the Common people be thill and wed to them, then you pull the ghilt of King Charles his blood upon your own heads; for then it will appear to the view of all men, That you cut off the Kingshead, that you might establish your felves in his Chair of Government, and that your aym was not to throw down Tyranny, but the Tyrant. But alas, the Kings blood was not our burthen, it was those oppressing Normins laws, whereby he enflaved us, that we groaned under.

Let it not be faid in the ears of polterity, That the Gentry of England affembled in Parliament, proved Covenant-breakers, Oaths, Proteftations, and promife-breakers to God, and the Common people, after their own turn was ferved ; and killed the King for his power and government, as a thief kils a true man for his money. I do not fay you have done fo, but for fhame dally no longer, but cut, off the bad laws, with the Kings head, and let the poor opprelled go free, as well as the Gentry and Clergy, and you will finde more peace. Let the Common land be fet free, break the Norman yoak of Lords of Manors, and pull not the cryes and blood of the poor opprefled upon you Seventhly, Know this, That if even you, or any Parliamene of England, do England good, you mult make all your laws in the light of equity and reafon, refpecting the freedom of all forts of people; but if you refpect fome fort of people, to wit, the Gentry, and Clergy, and give freedom to them; for they, by vertue of your Act of Parliament, eltablishing the old Norman laws; do arreft and trouble me and others, for digging upon the Commons, whereas by vertue of the Victory over the King, in regard I have to my cleate given free quarter and taxes for Englands liberty, as they have done, I have as much right to the Common land as they; therefore I fay, if the Gentry and Clergy mult have their Norman power eltablished to them, and the Common people, that are more confiderable for number and necefficies, be left full under the yoak, you will be proved the foolath builders.

Surely if you found out the Court of Wards to be a burden, B a and and freed Loid of Mannors, and Gentty front paying Eines to the King; and freed their children from the flavery of falling Ward ; Let the common People be fet free too from paying homage to Lords of Manors; and let all forts have freedome by vertue of this Conqueft over the Norman fucceffor. And feeing you took away the will of the King from enflaving Lords of Mannors, Take away the will of Lords of Mannors from erflaving the Common People.

Thus firs, we have made our Appeal to you, as the only men that muft. and can give fentence of freedome in this controversie, and that you will not leave us in the cruell hands of Lords of Mannors, the fucceflors of the Norman Task-mafters; For there are but three wayes that Lords of Manors can lay claime to the Common land, and yet all three are too weak to build a just title upon :

First, if they can prove, that the Earth was made by Almighty God peculiarly for them , and not for others equal! with them, then we have trefpaffed in digging upon their rights; but the Earth was made as free for us as for them ; therefore they have trefpassed against us their fellow-creatures, in troubling us by their tyrannicall Arreft, and hindering us from our righteous labor.

Secondly, if they fay, that others fold or gave them the title to the Commons, by way of Inheritance ; They are to prove by what Authority any other had from the pure Law of our Creation, to give away or fell the Earth from the ule of any of their fellow creatures, it being the common florehouse of livelihood for all, without respect of persons.

He that fels the Earth, and he that buyes, doth remove the land mark from the third perfon, becaufe the land that is bought and fold, belongs to the third man, as well as to the other two that buys and fels ; and they two perfons that buys and fels, and leaves the land that is bought for an inheritance to their children, excluding others, they murder the third man, because they steal away his livelihood from him ; for after a man hath bought the land, and paid money for it to another,

(13) he faith, this is my land, I have paid for it ; But the third man comes in, and faith, the land is mine, equall with you by the saw of Creation; And fo he that is the buyer, he begins to draw his fword, and to fight ; and if he conquer , he rejoyces, and fayes, the land is now mine indeed, I have bought, and I have conquered. But thou covetous perfon, fo long as there is another man in the world belides thee, and him whom thou haft killed, the Earth belongs to him as well as to thee ; And this is the cafe of the Nations of the world , and thus propriety came in , and hath been left as an Inheritance to Children; which is the burden the Creation groans un-

Here we fee who are thieves and murderers; even the der. buyers and fellers of land, with her fruits, these are they that take away another mans right from him ; and that overthrowes righteous propriety, to uphold particular propriety, which coverousnes the God of this world hath fet

But thirdly, if Lords of Manors fay, as it is truth, up. that they hold title to the Commons by cultome, from the Kings will, as they do, this is as bad as the other; for we know the King came in by conquest, and gave the land to these forefathers, to be task-masters over the conquered English. But if you fay, that these later Kings were chosen by the people, it is possible it might be fo, but furely it was when his greatness over-awed them, or elfe they would never have chosen him to enflave them, and to fet task-mafters over them.

But feeing the Common People have joyned perfon and purfe with you, to recover your felves from under the tyranny of Kings, and have prevailed; the Common people now have more truer title to the common lands, then the Lords of Manors, for they held title by Conquelt and fword of the King (we now the common people have recovered the land again by conqueft and fword in calting out the King) fo that the title of Lords of Manors is broke. Therefore

(14) Therefore now the Common people have more true title to the Common land, then Lords of Manors have, in regard they have recovered themfelves out of flavery by taxes, free quarter, and conqueft, yet we that them not out, but let them take part with us as fellow creatures, and we with them, and fo honour our Creator in the work of his own hands.

Thus we have declared our Caufe without flattery to you; if you leave us in the hands of oppreffion, and under the power of the old tyrannicall laws, know this, that we fuffer in purfute of our Nationall Covenane, endeavouring a Reformation in our place and calling, according to the word of God, and you fhall be left without excufe.

Set the Land free from Oppression, And righteoufnesse mill be the Laws, Government, and strength of that People.

These are some of the NORMAN Laws which William the Conqueror brought into ENGLAND.

Flands, and placed his Norman Souldiers therein, and made those that had the greatest portion, Lords, and Barons, and gave them a Royalty to the Commons, to hold from his Will, as a cuftome, whereby : the common people fhould not plant themfelves any where in the Land, upon any Common land, but fome Lord of Manor or other fhould know of it, and hinder them, as these that have arrested us, viz, Wenman, Verny, and Winwood, Lord, Knight, and Efquire, the three Eflates of the Norman Gentry, will not fuffer us to dig quietly upon Georges Hill, but feek to drive us off, having no more claim thereunto but an ancient Cuftom, which they hold from the Kings Will, whereby they have, and ftil would tyrannize over the people : And this is the rife and standing of Lords of Manors.

Secondly.

(19): Secondly, another Norman Law is this, William the Conqueror caufed the Laws to be written in the Norman and French tongue, and then appointed his own Norman people to expound and interpret those Laws, and appointed the English people to pay them a Fee for their paines, and from hence came in the trade of Lawyers; he commanded likewife that norman should plead his owncause, but those Lawyers should do it for them.

Thirdly, William the Conqueror broke that good and quiet courfe of ending controversies in a neighbourhood, and commanded the people to come up to Westminster to the four Terms every year to have their Causes tried.

Fourthly, William the Conqueror brought in the paying of Tithes to the Clergy, in thankfulnels to the Pope, and Clergies good fervices in preaching for him, and so to perfwade the people to embrace him.

These are some of the Norman Laws and Burthens, which if removed, it would be much ease and quiet to this Nation.
